KANDY, Sri Lanka - Raja, the most celebrated elephant in Asia, connect flat-out in the cool muddy river with the insouciance of Mae West between scenes, dawdling his trunk like a limp wrist in the hot afternoon.

"He is ready," said Raja's ma-hout, or handler, denying fears that the gallant $1-year-old tusker, stricken in recent years with theumatism and indigestion, would end a half century of fame and not be able to lead the great holy proces-sion of the Tooth Relic of Buddha in August.

"No, no, Raja is powerful," said J.M. Senaviratne, the mahout. "He's going to carry the casket another 10 years at least."

Raja always leads the parade in Kandy, dressed like a king in brilliant caparison and bearing the sacred casket containing the Tooth Relic past worshipful throngs.

As if in ascent from his river lounge, Raja jutted one of his tusks wei and grand from the water and he hulled the blowsy wet sigh of a defiant champion between rounds. But he stayed resting in the mud, idle as the state pensioner he has been for the last 20 years.

This creature, standing nine feet (2.75 meters) high, is the official national treasure of Sri Lanka, and he obviously knows it. As the time for the annual procession approaches, concern has grown that he might finally have to be replaced hy one of two younger understud-

"During the next few years," said Grier C. Cuban Force in Angola Is Called Demoralized General Who Defected Says Military Views Involvement as Its Vietnam

By Nathaniel C. Nash New York Times Service

WASHINGTON -- The Cuban Air Force general who defected to the United States in late May has broken his silence in a series of interviews that detailed widespread disillusionment within the Cuban military over its involvement in Angola

The general, Rafael del Piño Diaz, a former deputy commander of the Cuban Air Force, also challenged U.S. estimates that Cuba had 3,000 military advisers in Nicaragua.

General dei Piño said the number was 300 to 400, and that the Cuban public was so distillusioned by the Angola conflict that it would not accept another major foreign intervention."

He told of large numbers of casualties in the Angola conflict as well as numerous desertions from the armed forces.

L.A. AIDS Patient Was Held 5 Times

The Associated Press LOS ANGELES - A 28-year-old drifter who has been charged with attempted murder after selling his AIDS-infected blood had been detained and released five times in recent months despite efforts by the authorities to confine him to a mental health unit, investigators said Tuesday.

Joseph E. Markowski, who has AIDS, was charged with attempted murder on Monday after the police discovered he was carrying a re-ccipt for sale of his blood. Mr. Markowski pleaded not guilty to the criminal charge.

Mr. Markowski allegedly told the authorities he sold his blood and also worked as a prostitute in West Hollywood months after he had been diagnosed as carrying the AIDS virus and suffering from the disease itself. the U.S. government-sponsored radio station that broadcasts to Cuba, General del Piño said the Cuban Army has had 56,000 deserters in Angola in the last three years, and more than 10,000 casualties there in the last 12 years.

Cuba maintains a 30,000-man force in Angola to help defend the Marxist government against an in-surgency backed by the United States and South Africa.

"Only Fidel and Raul Castro have any faith in victory," General del Piño said in a segment of the interview broadcast on Monday evening, referring to the Cuban president and his brother, who serves as defense minister.

Furthermore, General del Piño added, morale is so low that members of the high command of the Cuban armed forces in Angola believe that "the war is lost" and refer to Angola as the Cuban Vietnam. It was not possible to verify from intelligence sources the accuracy of General del Piño's assertions and figures. The general complained bitterly about the treatment of young mili-tary recruits. He said they often are sent to Angola after minimum training and then are ordered into battle immediately.

He also asserted that when Cuban soldiers die in combat, they are buried in Angola and relatives are not permitted to have the bodies returned to Cuba.

On May 28, General del Piño fled Cuba with his wife and three of his children, flying in a Cessna rwin-engine aircraft from Havana

AGFUND 6th ANNIVERSARY

The peace of tomorrow depends on the children of today.

The Arab Gulf Programme for United Nations Development Organizations (AGFUND) was created in 1981 by the seven Arab Gulf States, upon the initiative of H.R.H. Prince Talal Bin Abdul Aziz

AGFUND concentrates on the improvement of the lives of the World's most disinherited children. It finances projects providing basic services to mothers and children and emphasizing the fight against poverty, hunger, disease and the development of educational and human resources.

Al Saud, President of AGFUND.

In the six years since its inception, AGFUND has supported 246 projects benefitting more than 200 million people in 115 countries.

These projects are submitted and implemented by 14 of the United Nations Specialized Agencies and Programmes: UNICEF, WHO, UNESCO, FAO, UNDP, UNEP, ILO, UNRWA, VFDP (Disabled Persons), UNU,

CD

UNDRO, UNFPA, IFAD, and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR).

AGFUND supports the role of the United Nations Organization as a unique Forum for Peace on Earth. AGFUND wishes to see the performance and efficiency of its Specialized Agencies continuously improved as an irreplaceable channel for development and humanitarian assistance.

AGFUND makes also direct contributions to such prominent public and private institutions fighting diseases and poverty, as the Pasteur Institute which has received grants for its research and virology work on AIDS.

Furthermore, the creation of the Arab Board for Child and Development (ABCD), in April 1987, under the sponsorship of AGFUND, is a major achievement in fulfilling the specific needs of the children of the Arab World. On the occasion of the 6th Anniversary of AGFUND, the Member States reaffirm their commitment to the struggle for a better World, with no discrimination as to race, religion or political orientation. They wish to express their gratitude to those who, by their action and support, turn this financial aid into a never-ending search for hope, dignity, and a brighter future for humanity.

The 1987 Revolution

Mikhail Gorbachev means to make a new revolution in the Soviet Union. There should be no doubt about that now. Last week he announced plans to partially dismantle central planning and radically re-form the subsidized pricing system. These have been at the heart of the Stalinist command economy. If pursued with vigor, these goals will entail a political turning inward, perhaps away from distracting additional challenges to Western interests.

Western leaders can welcome such a trend. They should applaud the loosening of authoritarian controls which will attend economic decentralization. They can even encourage the process with agreements, where interests coincide.

But debate in the West need not romanticize the enterprise, nor daily over whether it represents convergence with Western values and institutions, nor rush to proclaim its success or failure, nor exaggerate Western influence. What will happen will be rooted in Russian history and Soviet society. Mr. Gorbachev has set himself an awesome task.

The Soviet leader has spoken with rare candor about the sluggish Soviet economy, but until now had proposed only piecem solutions and relied primarily on exhortation and tinkering. Last week he offered for the first time a coherent plan to move the Soviet economy away from centralized ment toward local self-determination. He would use the sour of profits and reduce price subsidies. Under the plan, local enterprises would operate by contract, initially competing for state business, increasingly trading with one another independently on a wholesale level. The central planning agency would set comprehensive guidelines, not manage industries.

The plan has direction but lacks detail. Exactly how to change the elaborate pricesetting system remains unaddressed. Such touchy questions as bankruptcy and firing are handled gingerly. Bureaucrats have grumbled about these impending changes. But how fiercely will workers react when job security becomes an issue for the first time in Soviet history, when bread and transportation no longer cost a few kopeks? And however much Mr. Gorbachev calls for democratization now, what will he and his colleagues do if economic liberalization breeds political dissent, as in China?

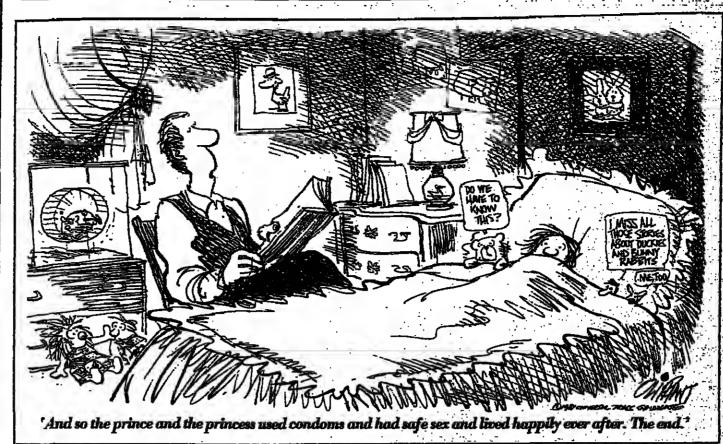

There will be ample time for mulling over the practicality of the plan and, eventually, its success or failure. There is time as well to contemplate the implications of a fat or lean Soviet Union for Western security. For the moment, the West would do well to mark the moment's significance: Yet another Communist giant, "the" Communist giant, now sets out to undo the revolution of 1917 with the revolution of 1987. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Europe: For a Diplomacy of Self-Determination

BERLIN - George Kennan, the man who articulated "contain-ment," indeed who invented it' in 1947, and since has been sorry about what became of it, made a characteristically penetrating observation last week on today's changing intellectual and political atmosphere. Speaking to a German Marshall Fund gathering in Berlin, Professor Kennan said that what happens next in the drama of Europe's division must come from the Europeans ves. It cannot be expected to come from the superpowers.

Enropeans will have "to discover the paths of escape" from the political deadlock that blights the continent and endangers its future --- endangering it not so much by the risk of war as from the fact that the Soviet Union's domination of Eastern Europe is, in the long term, unsustainable.

Professor Kenoan did not say the last, but I doubt that he would disagree. What he did say was that the United States and the Soviet Union are distracted by their interests and commitments, and by wars, elsewhere in the world, and are "immersed in a sterile and tragic long-range military rivalry — a rivalry predicated on the existence of Europe's divided condi-tion and not conducive to the exploration of possibilities for its removal." This, 1 would think, is just what most Europeans do not want to hear. In Eastern Europe the longing for change runs deep, but between banks of extreme risk. Czechoslovaks, Hungarians and Poles all have explored models of peaceful change, and all, except for Hungary's economic reforms, have eventually provoked direct or indirect Soviet repression. The Mikhail Gorbachev demands that the East German, Czechoslovak and Roma-The notion that Europeans must take charge of their continent's future makes all extremely measy. They nian authorities change their ways. claim that they are weak; the superpowers are superpowerful. The reali-ty is that the Europeans are stronger The core problem in Eastern Europe is that the Soviets have failed as imperialists. A successful imperialist inspires respect and the emulation of those he rules. He imposes his values, his norms of civilization, and these than they will admit, and that the superpowers grow less and less super. The only recent innovative thought Western Europe has been on secuin rity rather than political matters, and are accepted as superior ones. The conquered want to say, too, "Civis Romanus sum!" No one in Eastern it responds to the perception that the American guarantee and presence may fade. Thus French and West Europe would dream of saying with pride that he is a citizen of Moscow. Germans have talked halfheartedly The idea is grotesque; the fact that it is so condemns the existing system. about the problem of a European deterrent, and are now to expension with a marged conventional force. The Swedish government — and the British Labor Party, the West Common Dutch and Danish left, the Western Europe avoids change out of complacence rather more than fear. Moreover, the West Europeans have for years renounced autonomy in the large matters of international Green parties - call on the super-powers to renounce their auclear politics. They leave all that to the United States - or to "the alliance," arms and stop being what they are.

Europe Is a Harmony of Many Voices

T HE hallmark of modern Europe is diversity, not uniformity. In the European concert of nations, to revive a concept from the 19th century, not only the voices of the major powers are heard, but also those of the smaller countries, and they are what gives Europe its real harmony. Not to mention the full, rich tones which the music could achieve if the East European commission could also join in. The ability to point the way to the future by setting an example is by no means the exclusive province of the traditional great powers. The diversity of the European family benefits from the fact that all countries provide an impetus to further progress. It is precisely the interplay between great and small nations which gives rise to opportunities which go beyond power politics for the benefit of all. — Neue Zitrcher Zeitung (Zurich).

But this avoids the essential problem, which is political. If one makes the proposal, even to a man as senious as the new Swedish a min as schools is the new second prime anister, Ingvar Carlsson, that Sweden could make an intellectual contribution (at least) to the problem of moving its Contral European neighbors closer to a political and security status resembling that held by its other neighbor, Finland, this is taken as an exotic notion. Yet Sweden since the war has played a tacit role as a guarantor of Finland's neutrality, and is a credible and respect ed diplomatic interlocutor in both Bastern and Western Europe. Nuclear weapons and foreign ar-mics are in Central Europe because of the political division of Europe and a superpower rivalry now so encrusted with habit and thetoric as to be breakable only by so drastic a reversal that it could put everything at risk. Examples of that would be an American decision to pull out of Europe or to make a sharp reduction in its commitment, or, a calculated Soviet offer to West Germany of German unification,

There has to be a safer way. Time is overdue for European chancelleries — inheritors, as they have been known to remind the unsubtle Amercan, of a proud and resourceful difor what happens next on their own continent. The purpose of diplomacy is to identify and achieve the "inclusive common interest" (Sir Harold Nicolson's phrase). This is nowhere more needed than in the relationship of Eastern with Western Europe, and them both to the superpowers. International Herald Tribuoie.

What Ho, Anyone for Sea-Lanes?

By Tom Bethell

STANFORD. California - Does' S the United States really used a 600-ship mavy? It would seem that 600-ship mivy? If would been that conservatives, perhaps without realiz-ing it, have managed to impose on the national psyche 3 subliminal board game that might be called "Sea". Lanes!" It goes something like this. First there are "strategic manerals." which are always said to be "vital." Include oil among them. The object of policy is to transport these minerals to your home port, without "interdiction." En route are hazards.

The minerals must be shipped ihrough "sea-lanes," along which he the dreaded "choke points." Worst of all, there is the specter of the Soviets finally getting their "warm water port," sought, we are always told, "since the time of the case." If your strategic minerals get blocked in a choke point, you lose the game. I have attended anti-Communist conferences at which great maps are infarled, red arrows appear thrusting against one another (choke points). "strategically vital" regions seem threatened (there is barely a corner of "threatened (there is oursely a conter of the globe that has not been called "strategically vital" at these confer-ences) and at some point the worst happens: "Warm water port" or "choice point" tramps "strategic min-eral." Then what? You guessed it. Defense spending must be increased. My impression is that many liberals are initiated by all this, afraid of being labeled soft on communism, in nnch the same way that conservatives have been intimidated by talk of com-passion, the needy and the homeless. President Reagan played "Sea-Lanes" when he returned from the economic summit in Venice last month. He defended further U.S. military expansion into the Gulf and the flagging of Kuwaiti tankens by saying; "If we don't do the job the Soviets will." America would thereby "abdi- 11 cate our role" as a naval power. The Soviets would "move into this choke point of the free world's oil flow." This analysis really does belong in the 18th century. It dates from a time of freebooters and buccaneers, when merchantmen were insecure on the high seas even though the countries they sailed from were not at war. It was hard to catch these ships on the high seas, but there was always peril at choke points. Mr. Reagan's thinking comes from the playbook of Horatio Nelson — or perhaps Horatio Hora-blower. It has little to do with today. . What are the Soviets supposed to do? Run up the Jolly Roger and board supertankers like pirates? Divert them to Vladivestok? No one ever spells out exactly what is supposed to happen, precisely because we would all then see the implausibility of the underlying premise; Ships away from bome port are up for grabs and can be seized without triggering a more general con-flict. Otherwise known as war. But a

An OPEC Compromise

OPEC's meetings are always a useful reminder of the political geography of oil where it comes from and how its price is set. Currently the price is being set by OPEC's limits on production, limits that the member governments, remembering last year's price collapse, are now observing much more carefully than has usually been their custom. The meeting that ended last weekend was remarkably short and serene. The final agreement was a compromise between Iran s demands for higher prices and Saudi Arabia's lower-price strategy - and once again the compromise has been tilted slightly in favor of Iran. It is calculated to raise the price slowly from the present $18 a barrel as winter comes and demand rises.

In the view from Washington, the striking thing about this meeting is that neither the OPEC governments nor the infinitely sensitive oil markets seem to fear that the flow of oil through the Gulf might be cut off. President Reagan is talking about going to great lengths to ensure freedom of navigation, but the Gulf countries do oot appear greatly concerned by the danger to shipping.

One reason is that all of them have been at work building pipelines to reduce their de-carry its oil overland around the Strait of Hormuz to a port on the open sea. There is good reason to keep U.S. naval ships in the Gulf. But the reason is to give visible support to the Arab states, now under pressure from Iran. The degree of that pressure is accurately measured in the OPEC meetings. The Saudis lost the initiative there last summer in part because of Iran's gains in the war. The Arabs are now avoiding open quarrels with Iran and are prepared to accommodate Iranian interests by pushing oil prices cautiously upward. The most imminent threat to Gulf oil supply is not that Iranian planes and missiles will shut off tanker traffic but that Iranian political influence will induce the neighboring Arab states, with their huge capacity, to cut production and force up prices. That would be very good for oilexporting countries with limited reserves, such as Iran. And it would be very bad for the rest of the world.

Security at the Embassy?

The outsiders appointed to look into revelations of Soviet bugging and questionable for the imperatives of embassy security, Marine conduct at the U.S. Embassy in Congress will no doubt want to equip itself Moscow are now checking in. James Schle-to keep an eye on how well the department does in building buildings and maintaining fense, has proposed a plausible plan of re- security at them - problems which aspast errors and that it is now fully organized building and new construction to fight the bugging, and Melvin Laird, also a former secretary of defense, is about to submit his report on security personnel and procedures.

Mr. Schlesinger, in Hill testimony, made plain that grievous errors of judgment had virtually invited Soviet exploitation at the embassy. First at fault was an attitude of seeming indifference to the whole Soviet tradition of contempt for and distrust of foreigners. Because of this attitude, the Soviets were given extraordinary opportunities to load up the embassy with bugs of a technological advancement even now beyond American matching or countering.

The State Department is alert these days to the corrosive insinuation that if it cannot make and police an agreement on building its own house, it cannot expect to be entrusted with more demanding tasks. The department insists that it has learned from sumed proportions of scandal in Moscov but which exist for the United States in one or another degree around the world. American alertness, bowever, is not enough, according to Mr. Schlesinger; Soviet cooperation is essential, too. It is foolish to expect the Kremlin to abandon its propensity for espionage, but it is essential to negotiate new construction terms that will allow the United States to protect itself adequately. The requisite leverage may be available, Mr. Schlesinger suggests, in the Soviets' desire to gain full use of their own newly constructed facilities in Washington. They may also wish to contain the outrage that they now can see Americans feel about the Moscow embassy penetrations. The Kremlin's approach to this matter will be a good test of its seriousness about improving relations with the United States. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

Other Comment

Going Overboard in the Gulf

President Reagan is half right and half wrong in his decision to escalate the American role in the Iran-Iraq war. He is right to support international efforts to end the almost seven years of warfare. He is wrong to rush ahead with the plan to place the American flag on 11 Kuwaiti tankers, an intervention both risky and unnecessary.

The peace initiative will not be easy for the Reagan administration. In the reckless and illegal transfer of arms to Iran, masterminded by Mr. Reagan's own National Se-curity Council staff, the United States lost credibility as an impartial peace broker. Now he appears ready to wage war against Iran, tilting the scales the other way to favor tran, many the scales the other way to favor Iraq by helping Iraq's ally, Kurwait. All of this is cloaked in righteous declarations about free passage and the importance of petroleum to the free world, declarations with a hollow ring in the absence of any evidence of the need for intervention.

Draping Kuwaiti tankers in American flags raises extraordinary riska. Nevertheless, the president seems determined to plunge in, suggesting that there is the risk of action by "a hostile power to establish a dominant position." Some of the most thoughtful members of Congress, including Sam Nunn, the most influential senator on defense matters, have urged the president to delay this initiative until there can be further study of the consequences. They are right.

The consequences are unpredictable, but it does not take much imagination to picture the unfolding of terrible events as the U.S.S. Missouri joins a carrier task force off the Strait of Hormuz. What if Iran, in another display of its unpredictable xenophobia, un-leashes its new Chinese-made anti-ship missiles against a Kuwaiti tanker flying the Stars and Stripes? Does the Missouri open fire or does the carrier task force launch its fighter bombers in a massive response? But aga what target? The missile launchers? An air base? Tehran? And does the navy then presume that war is declared and engage all hostile ships and aircraft? To what purpose? Freedom of the high seas? Perhaps. But that freedom has hardly been at question, for the tragic war has spilled over into attacks on less than 1 percent of Gulf shipping.

The measure of how tall America stands in the world is based on how it uses its power, not on how belligerently it behaves.

South Korea: Democracy Will Take Time to Build

around the world can breath a bit easier now that a political compromise seems to have been reached in Scoul. But steady progress toward a more open political system and democratic rights is likely to be difficult.

Recent cries on the streets for "Democracy now!" have tended to portray democracy as an absolute condi-tion: Get rid of the present gov-erament or hold direct elections, and then democracy will be achieved.

But democracy is a process. And, as sophisticated South Koreans both in the government and in the opposi-tion have reminded me, South Korea lacks some of the institutions and traditions for modern democracy. A direct presidential election will not necessarily bring the millennium.

that is a necessary step toward the peaceful transfer of power that President Chun Doo Hwan seeks. It might be helpful to remember some of the difficulties that stand in the way of progress toward democracy. These are only a few of the problems that portend further complexities even if all else proceeds smoothly. First, the Republic of Korea remains a nation under siege, living with a truce, not peace. An irrational dictatorship to the north, whose army remains in a state of full mobilization. regularly spews forth threats for Com-munist-style "liberation" of the South. Although the credibility of the U.S. commitment to South Korean security has been restored, such actions as the It could, however, give a nudge to-Pyongyang-directed bombing in Ran-

Too Slow Can Be Safer Than Too Fast

ALIBRATING the safest speed of transition from authoritarian to democratic government is far from an exact science. Liberals tend to push it too fast; conservatives often fail to push it fast enough. The greater danger, however, is in pushing too fast. It is harder to reverse course once it tips into chaos or totalitarianism than it is to step up the pace if it has been going too slowly. And Korea is a special case because of the aggressively hostile presence on its border of one of the most vicious and heavily armed totalitarian regimes in the world.

Two-thirds of the South Korean people are under 30. They have no memory of the Korean War, and relatively little memory of the grinding poverty that was the lot of most Koreans not long ago. They are beneficiaries of the economic miracle that stability, whatever its temporary cost in personal and political freedom, made possible at a crucial stage in Korea's development as a modern netion. Outsiders should be extremely hesitant about prescribing any specific rate or form of political evolution for a nation in precatious transition.

The three central challenges facing the next government, whoever heads it, are maintaining the nation's security against the threat from North Korea, continu-ing its economic growth and navigating safely the transition to a functioning democracy. Its success at the third may well determine whether it success at the other two. But navigating that transition requires doing so in a measured way, allowing the Koreans a chance to adapt as they adjust. As the Germans learned after World War I and as so many Africans have learned so tragically in our own time, introducing the ballot box does not always lead to liberty. It is in

For South Korea There Is No Going Back

T HE satisfaction, verging on incredulity, of South Korea's opposition leaders when told that their demands for democratic reform were to be met in full will be echoed in every democratic country of the world. For a state which is in economic and military terms already part of the advanced world to express its willingness also to embrace a democratic constitution, hold free elections and respect human rights is cause, above all, for rejoicing. Roh Tae Woo, the man who until [Monday] had been designated South Korea's next president, is to be congratulated on his courage. He has taken a risk on the political maturity of South Koreans which, it is to be hoped, will pay off. He deserves now to be given the support both of President Chan Doo Hwan in instituting the reforms as quickly as possible and of the opposition leaders in calling an end to the civil unrest. If between now and the expiry of President Chun Doo Hwan's term of office in February the proposed reforms run into difficulty or are abandoned, they will be seen as no more than a fraudulent device to halt the present unrest. In that case, President China and his designated successor — whose future is now inextricably linked with progress on reform — will be subject to popular wrath on a scale as yet unseen. Some of the younger generation (two-thirds of the population has been born since the Korean War) insist that the Chun government has overplayed the threat from the North, but American intelligence has confirmed the senousuess of that threat.

Second, South Koreans have had little experience with elections or democratic institutions at the local level. In traditional Confucian style, the gov-erament in Seoul has appointed local officials from the national bureaucratic pool. Elections for mayors and town councils were a reform that was repeatedly urged on the former presi-dent, Park Chung Hee, to no avail.

The Chun government only recently adopted policies that would lead in the direction of responsibly elected local governments. Opposition leaders have not pushed for local elections, perhaps because they want to be able to reward supporters if they achieve power. Third, the intransigent style of poli-tics inust change if South Korea is to match its economic achie wements with political progress. Many U.S.-educated Koreans who return - a superb elite corps of revolutionary moderniz-- bemoan the factionalism, the lack of spirit of compromise and the winner-take-all approach to politics. It is tragic that few of the major. leaders have anything resembling a thoughtful platform for dealing with, say, urbanization (Secol is growing) by more than a quarvamore than a quarter-million peoor long-term trade problems. Political parties do not really have programs; they are collections of factions with loyalties to personalities. Fourth, the absence of a solid basis of law backed by an independent judiciary has hindered political de-velopment. The Confucian tradition stresses the superiority of man over law, and there is little historical background to support concepts of equali-ty before the law, which is so essential for democratic procedures and insti-tutions. Traditions require respect for elders, rank and deference within organizations, and loyalty to family and clan above the law.

Finally, South Korea must resolve the inner tensions in its society that. result from having a century of change compressed into two decades: modation, rapid urbanization and the emergence of a TV generation. Sud-denly, South Korea is almost 80 percent urban, yet the traditional values we should be optimistic. South Koreans will frequently go to the brink as they test their opponents in any nego-tiation, but they have shown a capacity to settle on practical solutions. Scoul has handled its comonic and social change with remarkable sophistication. Inflation has been defeated, the international debt is being paid off and a new middle class is sharing in the benefits of the economic "mir-acle." Moreover, South Korea has just passed through its first period of ining out the military to restore order. Perhaps the most difficult thing for outsiders to realize is that the South Korcans will work out their political destiny and institutions in their own manner. The United States can encourage progress and accommodation as a friend and ally, but it has decreas-ing influence as this highly literate and self-assertive nation moves toward the forefront of global actors: After more than five years of dealing with South Korean leaders; I believe strongly in one fact: For each instance in which the United States might be tempted to take credit for turning the South Korean govern-ment in a positive direction, Americans must also be prepared to accept. blame for their mistakes.

The United States can be more effective by helping to maintain dig-nity for all parties as the political developments unfold than by giving the impression that it thinks Americans can call the time either from Capitol Hill or in Seoul.

c the worst anyway: The Soviets seize all the oil coming through the Guif. Then what do they do with it? What they already do with their surplus oil: Sell it on the world market for the world market price. This might actually reduce the oil price. Now I would like to go oven further 3 down the path of heresy. Let's "offer" the Soviets their czarist dream outtight: a warm water port in Iran. In fact, let's "offer" them Iran in toto. Conservatives seem to think that the only reason why Iran has not already been swallowed up is because America has stoutly resisted such a move. But think about it. The Soviets have struggled for seven years with Afghanistan. Imagine on top of that trying to cope with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. If I were president I would be tempted to invite the Soviets into Iran. "Mr. Gorbachev, you want a nice warm water port? Most Mr. Khomeiwaith water port? More Mr. Khomes ni. I'm sure you'll find him most ac-commodating." Then I would turn to the ayatoliali and say: "You're sick of the Great Satan? We understand, after everything that had happened. We're before to say accellant mer bet there going to say goodbye now. But there's someone else who would like to do business with you. Meet Mr. Gorbachev, and have a nice day." Two birds with one stone Conservatives are like an American football term that only learned to do one thing: block. When you mention Communist expansion, few can come up with anything more creative than: Block that communism! Communist takeover is the worst possible fate that can befall a country — but can't we give the ayatoliah credit for thinking the same thing? When will conservatives learn to throw the ball? Or perhaps better a little jujitsu? .

Sinking Down to the Bottom Line

N EW YORK - I have always thought that the best thing about being a reporter is the company. Long days where it's happening; long nights with people who love what they do. Journalism was never the best-paying business in the world, but that did not seem to matter because it had a high proportion of people who would have done it all for nothing.

That is changing rapidly. I have never seen and heard as much professional unhappiness as there seems to be these days among reporters and editors, correspondents and producers. The night and day talk has progressed from good old high-energy griping to frightened grumbling and, now, to depression.

The higher you go, the worse it gets. The stars of the business — names familiar to readers of The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal, Time and Newsweek, and to viewers of the three big American networks — talk privately and bitterly about getting out, or being thrown out.

Some of that is self-pity, some self-serving. But taken together it is an indi-cation that our world is disappearing. We are being defeated, and our values discarded, by accountants and manage-ment consultants and salesmen - the "managers," the bottom-line guys and the Hollywood types, too. Well, why should we be any different? "I feel as if I've wasted 25 years of my life," said a network television producer, a great success by any standard. This is not the organization I signed on with. Then we wanted to be the best and we were. Now I just hope we won't be the first network to drop news altogether." "They tell you Klaus Barbie isn't news, NATO isn't news," said a foreign correspondent of great prestige over hunch in Paris, "All they want back in New York is AIDS, restaurants and Lady Di We have lost our commitment to what we believe, people should know and just give them what they want. I'm looking. If you hear of anything, let me know." "f picked up the phone to quit last week," said a 29-year-old national newspaper correspondent on the fast track. "But I decided to wait until I had another job - in another business. I'm going to get out before my turn comes. They just pushed out two guys over 45 so they can hire four younger ones and save two pensions. That's called 'management,' when they first arrived? If so, why were no voices of disapproval raised until external pressure was applied? Certain-ly, our foreign investors have not disand if I was interested in management I would have gotten a master's degree across the river at the business school." I suppose the journalism that annacted played any reticence in taking advan-tage of the "good years" of apartheid; those three - three of dozens I have talked with recently in New York, Paris, Washington and London - was badly managed, at least by the standards of Harvard Business School. For decades, after all, The New York Times did not even have a news budget; editors just spent whatever they thought necessary to gather all the news fit to print. In today's brave new world, the manager assigned to run NBC by his superiors at General Electric began by saying something like:

By Richard Reeves

"Why run news at all if we can make more money using something cheaper?" The answer to his question was that the networks ran news (and public affairs programming) because the government forced them to as a condition of exclusive access to limited public airwayes. From the 1950s through the 1970s, money mavince us all that they deserved national largesse because they were public service organizations that just happened to be making huge profits. Now that is not necessary. America has a government dedicated to giving corporations what-ever they want in the name of more. It is possible that a network could replace the evening news with "Wheel of Fortune" and be given a national forest or two as a bonus for dedication to the free market.

And that is precisely what the networks are doing, seplacing expensive news with cheap games. More profit. Good bottom-bine management. They will do it as fast as possible because the Reagan adminis-tration could be realized by nearly who as possible because the scangar automus-tration could be replaced by people who throw around wom-out phrases like "public service" and "public interest." ABC's "World News Tonight," I sus-pect, will be the first to go. The cancella-fion will be supercond as an erransion of tion will be announced as an expansion of "Nightline" - providing Americans with viewing options" instead of the "inefficiency" of three competing news pro-grams at the same evening hour. port three newspapers. Why do we need three TV news organizations?" Right. And until ABC (or Larry Tisch's candy store, CBS) decides to kill its news programming, the managers can just keep pushing the news hour forward. In New York, ABC has already moved the news to 6:30 P.M., when fewer people are home, and put "Jeopardy!" on at 7. "Jeopardy!" is beating Tom Brokaw and Dan Rather in the ratings, so WABC in New York is making another $3 million or $4 million a year. Good management. Out West, where the national news feeds begin at 4:30 local time or even 3:30 in California, the nightly news has become the afternoon news -- coming on before people get home so they won't be bothered by the troubles of the world. We are seeing the end of an era that lasted more than a century. New news technologies, from telegraphy and wire services to nightly national news on radio and then network television, drew Americans together, playing a critical role in uniting the United States, which had fragmented to the point of civil war. Now there are exciting new technologies and services, including Cable News Network, but new management techniques based only on old greed are speeding up a new separation of the nation — the new man-agers would say "the andienon."

If all that depresses old-fashioned jour-nalists, so what? Who are they to stand in the way of progress - and in the way of the way of progress — and in the way of the new managers who restructured more important American businesses such as steel and automobiles and electronics? When unused land runs out, he said, private leaseholds should be carved out of huge state and collective farms.

Western analysis said Mr. Gos-bachev's remarks marked his most emphatic commitment so far to more private farming. His state-ments were part of an economic program submitted last week at a moeting of the Communist Party's Central Committee.

The Soviet leader stopped far short, however, of repudining the system of collective farms that were organized forcibly by Stalin in the late 1920s and completed early in the 1930s despite mass resistance.

The private plots that Mr. Gorbachev favors would be connected, at least loosely, to large state and collective farms. They would be devoted largely to the production of fruits and vegetables, meat and Italy has also long been a focal point for the paper's circulation department, especially when readership there surged following World War II. In December 1957, in fact, a printing operation was opened experimentally in Rome, with page "mats" (forms from which printing places can be molded) prepared in Paris each night and then flown south for next-day printing. By mid-1958, some 11,000 copies were being reproduced in Rome each day, and a separately edited "Mediterranean Edition" was planned. It was the paper's first fliration with multiple- site printing - a central element in its strategy today.

But in 1958, the ownership of the paper changed and the Rome operation was reconsidered. John Hay Whitney bought the ailing New York Herald Tribune (and its European edition) from the Reid family. The costs of the Rome edition continued to exceed revenues - a drain on the already embartled parent company. Then, in Within 2 week of the May 25 startup, sales in Rome jumped by one-third - the same growth that occurred when the charter flights began nearly 18 years ago.

The launch of the Trib's Italian press run became the focal point in late May for the paper's centennial celebrations in Italy. IHT executives greeted friends at a variety of gatherings, including a dinner hosted by U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Maxwell Rabb, a luncheon at the American Chamber of Commerce in Rome, and evening LHT receptions at the Palazzo Rondinini in Rome and the Principe di Savoia Horel in Milan.

But these sources are concerned that there is no obvious candidate to take over NATO's permanent headquarters here at a time when the alliance faces a difficult period, with major arms control agreements likely to be coming into effect and o renewed debate under way about the United States's commitment to European defense. Possible candidates under discussion include Manfred Worner, the West German defense minister; Leo Tindemans, the Belgian foreigo minister; and Kare Willoch, former prime minister of Norway. But many officials have reservations about all three.

The secretary-general of tha North Atlantic Treaty Organiza-oon has no fixed term of office and serves at the pleasure of the alliance's governing council. The secretary-general's salary and other terms of service have never been revealed.

Using computers and sensors, scientists can now discern the distinctive signatures of faulty parts inside nuclear reactors or the buzz of aggressive "killer" bees.

They have learned to single out and neutralize unwanted sounds, fighting noise with "antinoise," sound whose wavelengths are exactly the opposite of the unwanted noise. No Sign of Planet X, but Theory Lives

NEW YORK (NYT) — The two Pioneer spacecraft traveling far beyond the known planets have failed to find any evidence to support speculation that a 10th planet is out there somewhere, but that does not necessarily settle the matter, a space scientist says.

If there is a large planet toward the edge of the solar system, said John Anderson of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, it must be traveling in an clongated orbit nearly at a right angle to the orbits of the other planets. Such an orbit would bring the planet near the rest of the solar system only every 700 to 1,000 years, he said.

He described this new hypothesis for the possible existence of what some astronomers have called Planet X at a news conference at the Ames Research Center in Mountain View, California. The center is directing the flights of the Pioneer 10 and 11 spacecraft, which are more than four billion miles out from the sun.

Astronomers have long searched for Planet X to account for perturbations in the orbits of Uranus and Neptune. These wobbles indicated that some large, distant object was exerting a gravitational tug on the known onter planets. The search led in 1930 to the discovery of Pluto, but it was found to be too small to disturb the orbits of Uranus and Neptune.

New Class of Antibiotics Developed

NEW YORK (NYT) -- Swedish scientists have developed a new class of antibiotics that promises one day to assist in the treatment of infections caused by some of the most dangerous and resistant strains of bacteria, the scientists report

The antibiotics are synthetic chemicals that scientists at the Astra Pharmaceutical Co. in Sweden have tested in laboratory experiments against a large group of bacteria that causes many infections of the urinary tract and complicates surgery and hospital stays. The new antibiotics are unusual, the scientists said in an article in Nature, the British scientific journal, because they have been designed to be absorbed by the bacteria and then to attack from the inside.

The new class of antibiotics is designed to kill only Gram-negative bacteria ----so named because they do not retain a crystal violet chemical stain used as a standard laboratory test in everyday medical practice. Infections caused by Gram-negative have become an increasingly impor-tant problem in medical practice, in part because they have developed esistance to antibiotics.

Status of Panda Is Seen as Critical Fred Enfield

WASHINGTON (UPI) - With the death of a baby giant panda at the National Zoo, a wildlife expert warns that the survival of the rare species

"We acknowledge a future role of zoos. Zoos can provide coopera-tion," Bruce Bunting, head of the World Wildlife Fund's Asia program, said, "But the real need is habitat. You've got to set aside wild areas." The survival of the giant panda has suffered repeated breeding setbacks in captivity — the latest with the death of the second panda cub born to Ling-Ling at the National Zoo. The other twin died soon after birth. Ling-Ling, a gift from China and the only panda to give birth in the United States, has lost each of her four cubs since 1983.

Mr. Bunting warned that the current plight of the panda is "more critical" than that of the Bengal tiger of southern Asia, which needed a massive effort by environmentalists before it was saved from extinction. In the wild, the expert estimated, there could be as few as 700 pandas left. nearly all of them in the Szechuan Province of southwestern China.

High Levels of Pesticides in Rainfall

NEW YORK (NYT) - Agricultural pesticides enter the atmosphere and fall to earth in precipitation to a much greater degree than previously elieved, a new study has found. In an analysis of rainwater samples from Ohio, Indiana. West Virginia and New York, scientists found that pesticide levels varied strongly from season to season. They reached a peak in rains right after the heaviest applications in farm fields in the spring and were detectable in decreasing amounts for about two months. but were not detected in the winter.

The study, reported recendy in the journal Nature, is the beginning of an effort to study the long-term effects of pesticides in taniali. The cavironmental significance of these findings is uncertain," the authors said, Herbicides now in use are not very toxic to animals, they report, and both herbicides and insecticides in current use remain in the environment for shorter times than predecessors such as DDT.

People Often Can't Judge How They Impress Others

By Daniel Goleman New York Tumer Service

ONE major psychological the-ory holds that people construct a self-image from their judgment of the impressions they make on others.

But that edifice may be a shaky one: People are remarkably poor judges of the way they really impress others, a recent study shows. Their accuracy is barely better than chance," said Bella DePaulo, a psychologist at the University of Virginia, who did the study.

The research - a simulation of situations like job interviews, first dates or parties - speaks not only to that urgent personal question "What kind of impression did I make?" but also the query on the other side of the encounter. "Does he realize what a foot he is making of himself?"

In the experiment, reported recently in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, college students were put in groups of six, all of them strangers. The students spent two hours together in a series of tasks, including one student's acting as teacher to another and the playing of a word-guessing game like television's "Password." There was also a discussion of moral dicommas, such as which of 10 needy people should be given access to the only three available kidney dialysis machines.

At several points in the two bours, the students rated one another. They also made a guess as to the unpression they were making on the others.

The students were often wrong in their ideas of the impression they vere making. Dr. DePaulo said. She cited "the overriding norm of politeness" as a major reason for this. 'People just do not tell you when you are making a fool of sourself: they simply let it pass in silence," she said. "Things go more smoothly that way."

Furthermore, people are generally poor at seeing through such social deception, Dr. DePaulo has found in earlier research.

Even when people are with those they know well, Dr. DePaulo believes, they may assume they are haking one impression, when they are really making snother. "Even iriends are reluctant to express neguive impressions," she said. "People rareiv get accurate information about the negative impressions they may be making." (In the other hand, people who have social antiety might take beart from the findings.

INTERNATIONAL MANAGER

Finding Corporate Identity In a Dusty Antique Shop

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

International Herald Tribune ONDON - Fancy perusing antique shops on company time? It is becoming a big part of some managers' jobs, as they scour sbops or anction bouses for their company's roots. Some companies have even created their own museums for this memorabilia,

Among the companies that have gathered their early advertise-ments, vintage 1900 tn 1930s, and other collectibles from cars to carafes, are Pengeot SA, Générale Biscuit SA, and the drinks groups Martini & Rossi, Pernod-Ricard SA, St.-Raphael SA and Coca-Cola Co.

'Companies are their past,' one

executive said.

"You can very well inte-grate the past with contemporary advertising. Companies are starting to behave just like people who are interested in their family tree," said Patrice Brault, an executive with St .-Raphael, the French drinks distributor. St.-Rapbael has been asked by its U.S. distributors for reproductions of a 1935 ad to hang in bars and restaurants.

Companies are interested in knowing what their past was and the best way to dn it is through ald posters," said Mr. Brault, who spends some of his time searching for examples from the 1920s and 1930s.

"It's obvious that companies are looking far their roots," said Herve Phulain, an auctioneer at Drount, the Paris auctinn house, who organizes several poster auctions a year.

Nonetheless, art experts do not attribute any price increases to corporate buying but to American collectors. "Companies only represent 1 to 2 percent of the total market," said Alain Veille, an art appraiser in Paris who also specializes in turn-of-the-century

"The top end of the market, such as posters by Toplouse-Lautree, doesn's concern companies. Remember that a lot of brand names have disappeared since the beginning of the century and companies are only interested in posters which advertise one of their products," he cantinued.

"Many corporate posters sell far between 500 French francs ($52) and 2,000 francs," be added. "They weren't wonderful works of art then and they still aren't today."

HERE ARE exceptions. Just like works of art, the price of old ads depends on the artist. Last year, for instance, a 1930s aperitif poster "Du beau, Du bon, Dubonnet," by Cassandre, a well-known poster designer of the 1930s, fetched 180.000 francs.

Two weeks agn, a French company that makes eyeglasses paid 15,500 francs for a 1930 ad by Paul Collin, another widely known graphic designer.

But some marketing professionals believe it is best to keep the past in the eloset, "We don't run around auctions to buy memorabilia nf our company," said the director of international market-ing for Martini & Rossi in Paris, "We are more turned towards the future." Even so, the company bas a museum in Turin retracing its corporate history. Yet other companies have been saving their ads for years.

Générale Biscuit, for instance, has kept all its cookie ads drawn by a well-known graphic designer of the '30s called Mucha, a Czechoslovak whose posters are also sought by a fellow Czech, the tennis champton, Ivan Lendl.

Many companies, though, have had to hunt for their past. Pernod has yet to find any of the original posters of 1935 for the aperitif Suze, ahead of the drink's centenary in two years. "Unfortunatly we made some big mistakes by not keeping them," said Bernard Livry, a spokesman for Pernod. "Some of the graphic designers became quite well-known and the ads now have an artistic value."

Perhaps the foresighted manager should stockpile now. "The poster was the art of the garbage can." noted Mr. Poulain, the auctioneer. "People either threw them out, used them to light their fires or to wrap fish."

Norsk Seeks to Cut Oil Field Costs

By Juris Kaza Special to the Herold Tribune

OSLO - Norsk Hydro A/S, 25 operator of a 7 billion Norwegian kroner ($1.045 billion) project in the Oseberg offshore oil and gas field, is looking for ways to cat development costs following an anfavorable tax ruling, sources close to the company said.

The consortium developing the Oseberg North field, led by Statoil. formally said Wednesday only that it was studying how to proceed with the project, after the Finance Ministry earlier this year said the work did not qualify for tax concessions that are available to a number of other North Sea fields.

As a result of that ruling, the consortium had stopped its development work, and is expected to conclude a study of the project by Oct. 1.

But the sources close to Norsk Hydro said the company had essensally decided to make the best of the unfavorable ruling by looking for ways to cut costs. Norway's new oil tax laws, which nounced in November.

national Herald Tribune MUNICH -- Net profit at Sie-mens AG is likely to decline in the current fiscal year from the 1.47 billion Dentsche marks ($800 million) posted in the previous year due to the weak dollar and the sluggish West German economy, a company spokesman said Wednes-

The news was contrary to stock market expectations, and sent the West German electrical giant's share price down 26.10 DM to a closing of 685.90 DM in trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange Wednesday. The magnitude of the decline in net profit is likely to parallel that registered between fiscal 1986 and the previous fiscal year, the spokesman said

Record earnings of 1.53 billion DM were set in fiscal 1985. Sales in the fiscal year ending in 1986 fell to 47 billion DM from 54.6 billion

TOKYO - A Japanese consortium planning to build a auto manufacturing plant in Poland has decided to extend a private loan to help finance the $680-million project, Japanese sources said on Wednesday.

Mr. Toshikumi Yahiro, chairman of the Japan-Poland Economic Committee, told the visiting Polish leader, Wojciech Jaruzelski, that the Japanese consortium would extend some 10 billion yen ($69.8 million) ahead of government credits.

The project is promoted by four Japanese firms, comprising three leading trading firms — Mitsui & Co., C. Itoh & Co. and Sumitomo Corp., and Daihatsu Motor Co., a Toyota Motor group company specializing in the production of small passenger cars.

The project calls for annual production of about 120,000 CALLS.

the basis of developments so far, we expect results for the 1987 business year to be roughly in line with those from the previous year."

In 1986, Daimier reported a world group profit of 1.77 billion DM, up from 1.68 billion DM in 1985. Parent company net rose to 1.40 billion DM from 1.25 billion. Revenue from car sales was flat at 15.30 billion DM in the half, while sales from commercial goods vehicles rose 5 percent to 9 bil-tion DM. Sales at the company's AEG AG subsidiary rose 5 percent to 5.20 billion DM. But sales fell at Daimler's two other main units, Domier GmbH and MTU Motoren- und Turbinen-Union GmbH. Daimler said the weak results at these two subsidiaries primarily reflected changes in the value of the dollar. In contrast to the West German industry as a whole, Daimler reported a strong rise in car

PARIS -- Compagnie Générale d'Electricite, the telecommunications and industrial group denationalized last month, expects secondquarter sales in line with the considerably increased revenue in the first three months of 1987, company chairman, Pierre Suard, said

Dollar Mixed, Sterling Off Highs

LONDON -- The dollar closed mixed Wednesday in quiet trading, but off its lows, while sterling slipped from its highs on continued profit-taking, dealers said.

Few dealers expect the dollar to break out of its recent range of 1.81 Deutsche marks to 1.84 DM in the near future, but several forecast that the pound will improve on Britam's strong economic fundamentals

Some dealers said the dollar received a slight boost from Wednesday's U.S. construction spending figure for May, up 0.3 percent after a revised 2.3 percent rise in April.

- In London, the dollar closed higher at 1.8285 DM, after 1.8250 Tuesday; at 146.80 yen, down mar-ginally from 146.85; at 1.5185 Swiss francs, up from 1.5150 and at 6.0951 French francs, up from 6.0875.

The pound, however, gained slightly on the dollar, to $1.6145 from $1.6130

On its trade-weighted index against a basket of currencies, the pound closed at 72.3, off the high of 72.7. A dealer with a U.S. bank said of the British currency, "sooner or later it's almost bound to rise." The pound has been hit by profit-taking following the Conservative Party's victory in last month's elections. Fundamental factors that should boost the pound include firming oil prices, political stability and a steady stream of bullish macroeconomic forecasts, analysts said. In New York at midday, the dollar was also little changed from when central banks have shown their willingness to stabilize exchange rates. However, New York dealers said the dollar found some support from comments by the U.S. commerce secretary, Malcolm Baldrige, that the United States is turning the comer on trade. To some dealers' surprise, the dollar did not weaken when federal funds, the overnight reserves traded among banks, dropped to 6.375 percent from the recent average of 6.75 percent. Most economists beheve the decline is an aberration caused by technical factors. Earlier in Europe, the dollar was fixed lower in Frankfurt at 1.8222 DM after 1.8294 Tuesday, and at 6.0835 French francs from 6.1055.

Tuesday's close. With the long July 4 holiday weekend approaching, dealers said market participants were unwilling to force a major shift in the currency, especially

Global Economy Is Facing Slow-Up, World Bank Says

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE, THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1987

WASHINGTON - The World Bank has warned that the global economy faces stagnation or recession unless countries move to end growing trade protectionism, budget imbalances and other problems. In its annual world development report released Tnesday, the bank said that without major reforms there is a near-certainty of worsening in the Latin American and sub-Saharan debt crisis.

The bank noted that 1984 growth after inflation was 4.6 percent for industrial countries and 5.1 percent for developing countries. Last year, however, the rates decimed to 2.5 percent for the industrial countries and 4.2 percent for the developing nations.

The report contended that protectionism has not been successful in maintaining jobs or reducing adjustment costs, even in the protected industries. In the latest period for which figures were available, about 17 percent of the imports of industrial countries were subjected to some kind of nontariff barrier.

These barriers hit exports of developing countries more heavily than those of industrial nations, it said.

The bank's director of policy, analysis and coordination, Constantine Michalopoulous, said the need to reform the world trading system is now acute. He urged a new commitment to the principles of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and specifically called for a reduction of barriers in agriculture.

The proliferation of nontariff barriers - a wide variety of proce dural techniques including quotas - threatens the GATT principles, the report said, contending that developing countries that stand to lose most have powerful reasons for taking an active part in the newest round of multilateral trade negotiations.

> Openly acknowledging that they need help in developing products and cutting costs, Texas Instruments executives are forging closer ties with customers, suppliers and others, including Linear Technology Corp., a California customchip concern, and L.M. Ericsson AB, the Swedish electronics giant.

TI Instruments has also been working barder to accommodate customers' needs. Charles M. Clough, president of Wyle Laboratories, a large semiconductor distributor, said Mr. Junkins recently dazzled 82 employees at a Wyle distribution plant in Irvine, California, by introducing himself to each of them.

That came after a two-hour meeting with Mr. Clough and an hourlong critique of Texas Instru-ments' marketing programs by a Wyle manager. "It was tremen-dously impressive" and a big departure for Texas Instruments, said Mr. Clough, who should know. He worked for Texas Instruments for 27 years.

Mr. Junkins wants custom chips of all kinds to account for half of his company's semiconductor sales in 1992. But Texas Instruments was tardy in entering the ASIC business. Analysis estimate that they contributed less than 10 percent of its semiconductor sales last year.

The Japanese are also focusing on custom chips for growth, Mr. Cuhney said, "Texas Instruments can manage the challenge," he said, "but it means that a larger percentage of their business is going to be minerable in the future."

Toronto Financial Deregulation Starts Slowly

The Associa

TORONTO - Canada has counter. moved toward a free market in secutities trading by deregulating its insure that the Canadian market investment industry. "We didn't expect to see a large number of deals announced today," said Terry Shaughnessy, an analyst with Merrill Lynch Canada Inc. "But during the summer and fall there will be a lot more alliances, a lot of new foreign money coming to Canada."

Unlike the London's "Big Bang" in October, when pricing, brokering and government rules were all transformed at once, the changes in Canada apply mostly to ownership and will be phased in.

As of Tuesday, domestic banks, trust companies, insurance companies and industrial corporations were permitted to enter the seconities industry through partnership with an existing dealer or by setting up their own operation. Eventually, this could mean one-stop financial shopping, in which an investor

Foreign companies are now allowed to acquire up to 50 percent. of a Canadian securities firm. As of June 30, 1988, they may take total control of a Cana firm. The one-year delay is intended to give Canadian firms a chance to negotiate mergers and build capital reserves to compete with forcign companies with greater assets. In the past, only independent companies with at least 75 percent Canadian ownership could act as securities dealers in Canada.

The day before the deregulation on Bay Street, Torento's financial district, the first major foreign participation was announced. First National Bank of Chicago said it planned to buy 35 percent of Wood. Gundy Inc., Canada's second big-gest investment house, for 271 mil-iton Canadian dollars ($203 mil-owned operations in Canada. "It really doesn't make a lot of sense to let people come in from a country where Canadian banks can't go," said Allan Taylor, chairman of the Royal Bank of Canada. The question of open investment across the border is a sticking point in current free-trade talks between Canada and the United States. Initially, deregulation will only affect Canada's biggest financial center, Toronto. The province of Ontario provided the impetus for reform, and the federal government of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney set national guidelines last winter. The province of Quebec, where trading centers on Montreal, had already relaxed some rules. Other provinces are expected to follow. Some critics say the reform is too radical and could lead to U.S. and Japanese domination of the Canadian industry, the squeezing out of small and medium-sized dealers and the and ne tential conflicts of interest

A semifinalist at Wimbledon in 1981, Shriver weathered a third-set match point before eliminating the No. 4 seed, Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, 4-6, 7-6, 10-8.

Lendl, who said he would give up. his last two French titles for one Wimbledon championship, had too much on the big points for Leconte and beat the No. 9 seed, 7-6, 6-3, 7-6. VANTAGE POINT/Steven Crist A Horseplayers' Honeymoon in England

New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Everyone thought it amusing that the bride and groom were horseplayers, and did everything but order a pair of cooing thoroughbreds for the top of the wedding cake. When we left for a honeymoon in England four days after last month's Belmont Stakes, the wedding party's smug assumption was that we had timed the entire production to coincide with the opening of Royal Ascol

"You two won't last 10 days without going to the track," said well-wishers at the recep-tion. The handicappers were half-right. We couldn't stay away from the track, but Royal Ascot ran without us.

English racing bears about as much resem-blance to the American game as cricket does to baseball. A U.S. horseplayer is adrift overseas. It is crucial to be in the right place at the right time. A foreign visitor to virtually any region of the United States other than the South - New York, Florida, California, Chicago, or New England - will find the borses running almost any day of the year. Race meetings run for months before the action shifts to nearby sites.

In England, there are 39 race courses, but the longest meeting lasts only a week. It's York for a day or two, then Chester, then Newbury or Lingfield; if it's Tuesday, this must he Newmarket. And almost every course has a different configuration, rangin from a triangle to a figure-eight, as opposed to the standard U.S. oval.

A horseplayer abroad begins to long for a Daily Racing Form. The English record of past performances is nearly impossible to decipher — and not too helpful even after translation. Also, Europeans do not believe in time as it pertains to racing, so forget about making speed figures. As soon as one comes up with a selection, though, the fun begins. At the track, one can bet either with the Tote, England's standard pari-mutuel system, or with legal bookmakers who call out their fluctuating odds from a gallery of small booths. Even more action can he found at the country's hundreds of offcourse betting shops. The bets available are wild, most of them variations on parlays. Most small bettors try to come up with four or more horses in various races throughout the country, and link them in betting schemes with names such as Yankee, Union Jack, Patent Plus, Sweet Sixteen, Bull's Eye and Round Robin. The truly adventurous can try a Heinz (so-called because it involves 57 betting combinations) or the mighty Goliath — a seven-horse round-robin of 120 bets that includes 21 doubles, 35 pick-threes, 35 pick-fours, 21 pick-fives, seven pick-sizes and a pick-seven For an English race meeting, Royal Ascot, which opened on the fifth day of our trip, is a relative marathon, lasting all of four days.

The point of English racing is to hold your horse to a mild gallop until the last two furlongs. Steve Cauthen, the leading jockey and a national hero, has figured out that if every race is reduced to a twofurlong dash, it helps to have a head start.

Cauthen is frequently in front when the riders turn their horses loose, and often lasts to the wire.

There are six races daily, most of them graded stakes, but the main sport is a fashiou show and the opportunity to glimpse the Royal Family. The elite wangle tickets into the Royal Enclosure, where men must wear morning suits and top hats. Daily rental runs about $70. This all sounded like too much trouble, so we ordered a formal tea from room service and watched Royal Ascot on the telly. The BBC regularly shows four races a day live from whichever track is sponsoring an event, so we could watch two-thirds of the meeting after betting Heinzes and Goliaths at the bookmaker around the corner. And we got the bonus of extensive commentary on fashion (polka dots, known simply as "spots," were big this year).

The racing was pretty but peculiar. The point of English racing is to hold your horse to a mild gallop until the last two furlongs and then whip and drive to the wire. Steve Cauthen is the leading jockey and a national hero, widely praised for his brilliant sense of pace. This seems to mean that Cauthen, having learned something about early speed while riding in the United States, has figured out that if every race is reduced to a two-furlong dash. it helps to have a head start. Cauthen is frequently in front when the riders turn their horses loose, and often lasts to the wire.

A bettor can live by video alone for only so long, and by Day 9, the urge for live action was too great. By then we were in Edinburgh, and the closest action was at Powderhall Stadium, which bills itself as "Scotland's premier greyhound track."

Dinner for two ran about as much as the winner's purses, and there were no more than 500 people at the stadium, where dogs and motorcycles each run for three nights a week. The highlight of the evening was the fourth race — a steeplechase. No man is a complete hettor until he has wagered on dogs jumping over little fences.

We thought we had stumbled outo a bet-ting coup. Standing in line behind Scots mak-ing tiny bets, we heard a well-dressed man lean over to the cashier and take a plunge. "Fifty punes to win, No. 1," he said.

Fifty pounds (about $85) was a major move at Powderhall. No. 1, with what we hoped was the apt name of Bright Bandit, seemed to have dismal form in flat races. Maybe, though, he had been secretly trained over hurdles in the Scottish moors and pointed toward this spot for months. We bet £10 with confidence, but then watched with mild dismay as Bright Bandit ran true to form, last over every fence.

As we queued up for the next event, we were behind the plunger again, and heard him call out another big bet: "Fifty punes to win, No. 1." This time, though, we noticed that he handed over not a £50 note, but an eightsided coin — a 50-pence piece. We were ahead for the night, having cashed bets on dogs named Brooklyn Bill and Triboro Bridge. But when you can't tell your panes, pounds and pence apart, it's time to go home.

New York Times Service

NEW YORK --- New York City has announced that it will give $13.5 million to the Metropolitan Museum of Art to help finance the construction of the last major component of the museum's master plan, a five-story wing for European sculpture and decorative art.

The grant is the second largest appropriation ever made by the city's Department of Cultural Affairs to a building project; $15.5 million was given to Lincoln Center for renovations and a new building last year. The Met's new wing is to cost a total of $51 million; the first of its many galleries is to open to the public in the fall of 1988 with a major exhibition of the
